Cal-Am wants out of riverbank irrigation requirement

By DALE HINCKLEY

The California-American Water Co. is trying to find a way to expand its extraction of water from the Carmel Valley aquifer without subjecting the Carmel River valley to the destructive effects of a lowered water table.

These effects — primarily the destruction of riverbank vegetation, which could allow catastrophic erosion when rains swell the river — will come up for discussion Tuesday, Dec. 13, when Cal-Am appeals to the Board of Supervisors irrigation requirements imposed by the County Planning Commission on use permits for two new wells.

When they granted permission in August and October to sink and operate the Mid-Valley Stanton and Scarlett No. 7 wells to Cal-Am, the planners ordered Cal-Am to irrigate the riverbanks within 2,100 feet of the wells to maintain riparian vegetation — especially willow and cottonwood trees — and avoid erosion of the banks.

Cal-Am is appealing the use permit conditions because it believes conditions on the two new wells should be consistent with conditions imposed on its other wells in the Carmel River valley.

According to Cal-Am's Monterey Peninsula District Manager Dick Sullivan, the appeal is "based on the fact that in the use permit for the Canada de la Segunda Pipeline project, there was an agreement between Cal-Am, the supervisors and the Planning Commission" to study the need for riverbank irrigation before requiring it.

Requiring irrigation on the two new wells, Sullivan said, "would be picking on specific wells before the study is done. Their use permit has to be consistent with the others."

THE PROBLEMS accompanying the drawing down of the aquifer in the vicinity of wells were first noticed by Carmel Valley residents around 1961, shortly after the Monterey Peninsula Water District began extracting water in the valley.

According to a Nov. 1976 memorandum to the Zone 11 Water Advisory Committee prepared by one of its members, Edwin Lee, in 1961 "residents near the Berwick wells noted defoliation of the cottonwood grove surrounding the wells." Lee is a former president of the Carmel Valley Property Owners Assn.

In 1966, according to Lee's memorandum, a critical water shortage occurred, and Cal-Am (by then owner of area water facilities) applied for an emergency use permit for the Manor well, located upstream from the Schulte bridge, to meet demand until the rains came. At the final hearings before granting the use permit, Lee told the supervisors that "use of the wells would destroy the riverbank vegetation subjecting the banks to erosion which would endanger homes and other property along the river." Riverbank erosion began that winter near the Berwick wells, he says.

By 1969, Lee says, "the bank near the Berwick wells had eroded about 100 feet northward," and seven acres of Holt Ranch pasture was allegedly lost to erosion near a Scarlett well.

In 1971 two researchers — Dr. Paul Zinke, of the University of California at Berkeley, and Dr. Edward Stone, of Stone and Associates — were commissioned to study the problem by the Carmel Valley Property Owners Assn. and the California Public Utilities Commission.

"Both consultants," Lee reported, "agreed that lowering the water table by operation of the wells could kill riparian vegetation. Both agreed that an organized plan was required for preserving the existing vegetation by irrigation or replacing the river forest by vegetation more tolerant to severe drops in the water table."

Any operating well will cause a drawdown of the water table in its vicinity. Cottonwood and willow, which comprise most Carmel River riparian vegetation near the wells, will begin to die, according to some estimates, if the water table drops 10 feet below the surface.

Taylor's successor

Superintendent search aims for an executive type

By JIM BARRETT

AN EXECUTIVE TYPE skilled in public school personnel management and familiar with districtwide administration should be hired as the next superintendent of Carmel Unified School District, the district board of trustees has agreed.

The decision signaled a start to what is expected to be a four-month search for a successor to Superintendent Harris Taylor. Taylor, 56, has said he will resign in June. He has been the superintendent for 12 years.

At an informal session with its hired consultant, the board reached agreement Thursday, Dec. 1, on a personal composite to be used in finding a replacement for Taylor.

THE TRUSTEES discussed generalities about a replacement, but made specific comments at the prodding of the job search consultant, Donald J. Leu. Of seven professional skills mentioned, the board found a consensus in asking the new superintendent be skilled in selecting and managing personnel. Rated second was a desired quality that the new schools executive delegate authority and make sound professional judgments.

Trustees also told Leu they preferred a superintendent with experience working in a district central office. Ranked second was a background teaching at the elementary or high school level.

In addition, they agreed to state a preference for a superintendent with "intellectual depth" and a commitment to learning.

THE DECISIONS will be put into recruitment advertisements and a brochure the Carmel district will publish later this month. The rankings were derived from hiring criteria established Nov. 10 by a panel of parents, students and educators. The panel had circulated the slate of criteria to the public and throughout the seven-school district in October and tallied responses before making its own findings. The forms asked respondents to rank skills and personal qualities most desired in a new superintendent.

In two of the three categories of criteria, the trustees differed with the advisory panel. Under the "professional experience" category, the school board favored a superintendent with experience in a district central office. The top rating from the panel listed classroom teaching experience as the most desirable quality.

Also, under the "professional skills" category, the board preferred a candidate skilled in personnel selection and management. It ranked third the ability to evaluate and develop curriculum, the quality most highly ranked by the advisory panel.

The third category dealt with personal attributes. Leu said it would be difficult to find agreement on which of the eight listed attributes was the most desired. The items listed qualities such as concern for children, leadership capabilities, effective public speaking and good health.

THE SCHOOL board tentatively set an April deadline for selecting Taylor's successor. Applications for the job will be accepted until Feb. 10. The school board also agreed to set a minimum salary of $36,000 and expressed a willingness to offer a contract covering more than one year. Taylor is paid $39,648.

An outside screening committee under Leu's direction is scheduled to recommend eight to 12 candidates to the board on Feb. 23.

Santa Claus lands Saturday at airstrip

Santa Claus will arrive at the Carmel Valley airstrip on Saturday at 10:30 a.m. Mrs. Claus is accompanying the jolly old man on his annual trip to the Valley.

The festive affair will include a parade through the Village to the Carmel Valley Community Youth Center, where candy canes, donated by Longs Drugstore in Monterey, will be presented to each child. The youngsters will have an opportunity to tell Santa their Christmas wishes in person. There will be coffee, doughnuts, chocolate and cookies for the guests.

Lots of good music will be provided at the airport, during the parade and at the center by the Seventh Infantry Division Fort Ord Band, the Carmel High School Marching Band and the Dixieland Band.

Everyone is invited to enter the parade.

The 17th annual "Santa Fly-In" is sponsored by the Carmel Valley Community Youth Center.

Directors and cochairmen of the affair are Margie O'Hara and Jim Corso. Other board members working on the project include Dick McKenzie, president; Augie Acuna, vice-president; Nancy Hogans, recording secretary; Doreen McKenzie, corresponding secretary; and Lois Deal, treasurer. Other directors are Leland Collins, Peter Coakley, Ed Foote, Pete Garneau, Thelma Lee, Ray Lucido, Terry Stratton, Egon Werdelman and Joe Chaplis.

Chapel Guild meets Wednesday

The Carmel Valley Community Chapel Guild will meet on Wednesday at 12:15 p.m. in the chapel on Village Drive at Paso Hondo. The Victory Temple Trumpeteers of the Victory Temple, Seaside, will present a musical program under the direction of Mr. Allen Thomas, minister of music.

The guild's traditional Christmas tea will follow the program. Chairwoman of the tea arrangements will be Mrs. Theo Mirani assisted by Mrs. Rudolf Bautz, Mrs. Edmond Capon and Mrs. Gordon Wells. The tea will take place in Fellowship Hall, next door to the chapel, and all interested women of the community are invited to attend.

Son of Valley couple awarded medical honor

Dr. Steven G. Johnson, son of the Rev. and Mrs. Don Johnson, of Horizon Way, has been awarded the J. Jacob Kaplan Award for outstanding medical research by a fellow at the University of Minnesota School of Medicine for his original research on pancreatic amylase. The award carried a $1,500 honorarium and was the first to be given in Dr. Johnson's field of gastroenterology.

The 1964 Carmel High School graduate received the "Best All Around Padre Athlete and Scholar" title and various scholarships to Occidental College where he completed his premed work. He earned his M.D. at UC Medical Center in San Francisco and spent five years of residency and fellowship in Minneapolis, Minn.

He currently is practicing gastroenterology in Salinas with a group of internal medicine specialists.

Steve and his wife, Stevie, are parents of three daughters — Jennifer, Erin and Lauren. They make their home in Toro Park, Salinas.

STEVEN G. JOHNSON, a young doctor who grew up in Carmel Valley, recently received the J. Jacob Kaplan Award for outstanding medical research. He is pictured with his daughter, Erin.

Tree lights go on atop Saddle Mountain

The traditional Carmel Valley Christmas tree, on the hillside below Saddle Mountain, was lighted with pomp and ceremony by members and friends of the Mid-Valley Fire Department on Thursday, Dec. 1.

The tree was refurbished and rewired by Ken Silva, Marge Kohler, David Drewien, Maya Miyamoto and Gabe Houston with the Mid-Valley Volunteers providing new lights.

Nearly 80 persons, including many children, gathered at the firehouse to enjoy eggnog and cookies and wait until a symbolic switch was thrown to flood the tree with lights.

Play readied by Tularcitos Chorus

"The Small One" — the story of the fulfillment of a donkey's destiny — will be presented by members of the Tularcitos Chorus on Tuesday at 7:30 p.m. in the multipurpose room. The costumed production, under the direction of Joe Nokes, was written by Grace Hawthorne with music by John F. Wilson.

Faculty members also are in the cast, including Pat Allen, in the lead role of Gonzales, supported by Mary Puckett, the principal; Philip K. Smith, a teacher; and Peter Dibert, the auctioneer.

Student leads include Robbie Conne, as Pablo, and Steven Taylor, as David.

Dress rehearsal will be conducted on Monday at 10 a.m. Parents of first through third grade students are invited to this performance.

No admission will be charged.

Valley riders get top state awards

The California State Horsemen's Association conducted its annual awards banquet recently in Fresno honoring holders of accumulated points awarded for competition in horsemanship during the past year.

Named as top riders in the state of California were Valleyites Susan Pullman, who placed third in the 18 and over Western division; Mickey Cummings, who placed third in the 15-17 Western class; and Gina Halley, eighth in the 15-17 Western division.

Prior to the state awards, a dinner honoring riders from Region 10, encompassing Watsonville to King City, was conducted in Salinas. Carmel High sophomore Mickey Cummings, son of Mr. and Mrs. Don Cummings of Robles Del Rio, was named first-place winner in his age group for Region 10 1977 competition.

Sneak previews offered next Tuesday, Thursday

The Carmelo Choir, under the direction of Joe Nokes, offered two sneak previews of its annual Christmas program when it gave performances on Tuesday to friends at Carmel Valley Manor and on Thursday at All Saints' School.

Its musical gift to the community this year is entitled, "A Hundred Per Cent Chance of Rain" and may be viewed by the public on Thursday, Dec. 15, at 7:30 p.m. at Sunset Center in Carmel. There is no admission charge.

Tickets on sale for Christmas party

By JEANELLE KAMINSKE

Make your reservations now for our Christmas party on Wednesday at Rancho Canada. Drop your check for $9 off at the chamber office or phone 659-4000 for details. See you there.

Have you seen our new Chamber of Commerce brochure? Peter Coakley and his committee did a superlative job on a limited budget.

At our membership meeting in October, Representative Leon Panetta spoke. Some of his comments were:

"We've had mixed signals from the White House in the past eight months and an indication of inability to set priorities. We've had the Energy Bill, welfare reforms, social security reforms, housing, etc. And we've had mixed signals on some issues, such as income tax reforms. The new members are not going to have their arms twisted; they are thinking for themselves and deciding on their own what is best.

"I have to set my priorities:

"1) Water: We have serious water problems throughout California. We in Monterey County have almost 50 different agencies concerned with water management with very little coordination. A measure bill I've introduced is to try to bring it all together and say 'this is what we need to do for the country as a whole.'

"2) National budget: With the some 20,000 new bills that are introduced in each session of Congress, and at the same time we're supposed to be reviewing what these various agencies are doing, it is virtually impossible to do justice to it all. My proposal is, in the two-year Congress, to provide one year for budgeting, look hard at existing programs and new programs, decide what the new programs should be and what it should cost. Then the second year work on new legislation, so that we can take the time to see if HEW, or the Justice Department, etc. are doing their jobs effectively and if they're not get rid of them.

"3) Family Farms. We expect to lose in this session of Congress, 40,000 to 50,000 family farmers who are just going out of business — who cannot survive. I believe the family farm system is a very important part of our system. We don't just lose the family farm and its production; we lose a very important part of what this nation stands for. We've got to change the tax advantages, provide incentives, and guidance.

"4) As Chairman of the freshmen members of Congress we have really been involved in reform. I think we have passed an outstanding ethics bill for Congress. I can tell you this: If members of the House are not willing to police themselves, an ethics bill means nothing."

Wells issue

Valley wells last October was 38.3 feet.

Gary Tate, Monterey Peninsula Regional Park System district manager, said the drawdown near the Los Laureles well in Garland Park is 42 feet. Pumping began at the Los Laureles well last year. Since it began, Tate says, "I noticed some trees in close to the well are dead now — I believe it's due to the pumping. If you came out here, I could show you some willows that are dead." Normal water-table level in the area is 15-18 feet below the surface, Tate added. Garland Park is located just west of Laureles Grade Rd. in Carmel Valley.

Garland Park is the only area with an irrigation system to maintain riparian vegetation. However, as it was only finished a few days ago, and has yet to be used, effectiveness of the $8,000 drip irrigation/sprinkling system is unknown. Cost of the installation was shared. Cal-Am paid $6,000 and the park system the balance.

In allowing Cal-Am to delay installing irrigation systems near the wells involved in the Canada de la Segunda use permit, says District Manager Dick Sullivan, the supervisors agreed, in a meeting held last Sept. 6, that "an engineering study is needed before the (irrigation) conditions on the use permit are binding. It may be that irrigation is not the best way to go."

One reason Sullivan says the supervisors agreed to the delay and the additional study was that they found the estimate of $500,000 to

Polo tourney on for the weekend

The Carmel Valley Riding and Polo Center on Robinson Canyon Road will host the fourth annual All-Ladies Polo Tournament on Saturday and Sunday. Spectators are welcome both days at no charge.

Five ladies' teams will vie for top honors. In addition to a local CVRC foursome, teams from Salinas, UC Davis, Cal Poly at San Luis Obispo and Modesto will play.

The local team will include Tat Yakutis and Maria Thaler alternating in number one position; Gabe Houston and Carole Borucki in number two; Brenda Lambert at number three and Stormie Hale, number four.

Sue Sally Hale of the Carmel Valley Riding Center said one unusual aspect of the tournament is that many of the women also ride higher level dressage.

To reach the riding center, turn onto Robinson Canyon Road from Carmel Valley Road. At the second one-lane bridge, turn right and follow the dirt fork at the left to its end, about one mile.

Play begins at noon Saturday and at 9 a.m. Sunday. For additional information, phone 624-4530.

Lousy road repair

Dear Editor:

For many weeks during November, Carmel Valley Road, east of its four-lane section up through Carmel Valley Village, received intensive care from road crews working with heavy equipment.

Traffic was slowed and stopped. Lanes were routed onto shoulders and between gay conical markers while crews scraped the shoulders, poured patches and steamrolled away.

The result can only be described as a disaster.

I travel the road from the Village to Highway 1 twice a day and never noticed the need for such enthusiastic patching. Had the road crews torn up the pavement and returned Carmel Valley Road to its former dirt road status, the sensation of traveling along it now could hardly be worse.

And the right-hand lane markers, so useful on dark winter nights, are now largely gone.

Why?

Can't dig Pt. Lobos

Dear Editor:

I realize that this is somewhat out of your line, but I was wondering whether you could provide me with some information. While in school, I did considerable research on Robert Louis Stevenson and have come to the conclusion that Point Lobos might well have been the site of Treasure Island. This, in itself, is not new speculation, many others have suggested this, but I suspect that there might actually be something buried there. My question then is who do I contact for permission to dig there?

It's a long shot, but Stevenson was prone to doing things like this.

Safeguard water wells

Dear Editor:

I recently asked Assemblyman Henry Mello to introduce legislation giving communities like ours the power to stop new developments that threaten to deplete water supplies. I explained to Mr. Mello that: 1) We are now rationing water very severely; 2) We are still overdrafting the Seaside aquifer; 3) Private wells are still being drilled in Carmel Valley, which will further deplete Cal-Am's supply; 4) The water table in Carmel Valley is very low and still dropping; 5) We have no assurance that this is the last drought we will ever have; 6) We have even less assurance that Cal-Am will ever substantially increase its supply to us, either from additional wells or a "pie in the sky" new dam 15 or 20 years in the future; 7) We are getting very little supply-preservation help from the half-hearted PUC building ban.

Mr. Mello replied that: "Under present legislation, local government bodies are empowered to protect the health, safety and welfare of their citizens. Therefore, the power to do what you are asking now exists. It is up to your local elected officials to enact that power. This is a severe measure and usually is done only in emergency situations."

Mr. Mello's reply gave me hope. All we need, then, is: 1) An interpretation of how much reclaimed sewage we are supposed to learn to use before we can qualify for emergency situation status; 2) A divining rod to locate an elected official willing to volunteer to be first to commit political suicide by threatening to act responsibly for the good of the future of our community. Except for the mayor of Carmel, and perhaps a councilman, I don't personally know of any likely candidates for that mission.

The main overall, pretty hard to take problem is, of course, that the population of most of southwestern United States, including our little Peninsula, has caught up with and passed its water supply capabilities, and not many people are straining at the leash to jump up and ring the alarm bell, especially in heavily money-oriented communities.

Science and survival

Dear Editor:

Recently, a packed roomful of older folks listened to a brilliant talk, supplemented with revealing slides. The speaker at the Carmel Foundation — Carmel's remarkable center for the retired — was a physicist. He was the educational officer at the National Aeronautics and Space Administration at Moffett Field in Mountain View.

He told us what will happen in space technology and exploration by the year of 2000.

The troublesome query that dominated not only my thinking but that of many serious viewers of the human scene, is this: "What will avail all our space adventure mighty soon if man does not gallop to conquer the space between his ears and learn to live with one another in peace and security, discipline his primitive drive to mistrust and hate, fear and grab? Will man destroy himself with the nuclear and even worse weapons his science has made available? Are we to join other extinct species who could not master what is necessary for survival, in man's case his instinct to fight and fight and fight?"

Supes to hear Cal-Am appeal

meet irrigation requirements a bit steep: "The supervisors said the mitigation measures were too expensive, too restrictive, and they said there were other contributing parties," Sullivan explained.

The "other contributing parties" — and this could be the aspect of the entire problem which will generate the hottest debate — are the Carmel Valley residents who themselves have water wells.

CH2M Hill, the engineering firm chosen by Cal-Am and the Flood Control and Water Conservation District to do the $10,000 study, proposes not only to collect and review data on the need for irrigation near wells, and methods of doing so, but also to prepare a cost estimate of improvements.

Then they propose to "prepare a formula for allocation of cost of improvements between Carmel Valley landowners (as a group)" and Cal-Am, "generally based on diversions of water from the Valley by the water company."

This, says Edwin Lee, could be a sore point for Carmel Valley golf courses and farmers who he says "would object to being taxed to undo the damage caused by Cal-Am upstream."

The cost-sharing formula is the only innovation in the study proposed by CH2M Hill, as the 1971 study by Dr. Stone contained a series of alternatives for maintaining riparian vegetation, including substitution of oak, bay and buckeye for the willow and cottonwood, as the former could more easily adapt to a drier area with a deeper water table.

In any case, the Hill study will not get under way until spring, as the firm proposes to study riparian vegetation in the Valley through infrared photography, which can only be performed effectively after the leaves come out on the trees.

Some observers point out that the condition of the trees' leaves may become something of a moot point if study begins after the trees are dead.

Irrigation of the banks would only require an estimated one per cent of the water pumped from the wells, and Lee quotes an installation cost of about two dollars a foot for irrigation pipe.

However, in his Nov. 1976 memorandum to the Zone 11 Water Advisory Committee (included by reference in the Canada de la Segunda final Environmental Impact Report dated April 1977), Lee speculates: "It is also likely that should Cal-Am actively pursue irrigation of the riverbanks, the least costly and most practical method of reducing the hazard so far suggested, the tacit admission of responsibility would jeopardize the defense of their attorneys (sic) should compensation for damages (death of trees or erosion of riverbanks) be sought through litigation in the courts."

MPC singers due at mission

Christmas in the Mission, the annual Christmas presentation of the Monterey Peninsula Choral Society in historic Carmel Mission Basilica, will fill the venerable church with the joyous sounds of Christmas Friday, Saturday and Sunday, Dec. 9-11. All concerts begin at 8 p.m. Admission is $4.50.

Maestro Haymo Taeuber, conductor of the Monterey County Symphony Orchestra, will conduct the Choral Society, the Monterey County Symphony Chamber Orchestra and guest soloists. Featured works will be the Coronation Mass by Mozart and Magnificat by Bach. Other offerings will include music by Haasler, Host and Track as well as carols from Poland and Austria.

The Choral Society, founded in 1962, consists of more than 100 members. Its Christmas concerts have become an important part of the holiday season on the Monterey Peninsula. In 1970, the society and the Monterey County Symphony Orchestra celebrated the Monterey Bicentennial and the 200th anniversary of Beethoven's birth with a performance of the Missa Solemnis in the courtyard of Carmel Mission Basilica with more than 2,700 in attendance.

In 1975, Maestro Taeuber arranged and orchestrated a collection of spirituals and American Christmas carols in honor of the U.S. Bicentennial. These songs were performed at the 1975 Christmas concert and were so successful that they were broadcast over Radio Europe.

Soloists include Annelle Delfs, soprano; Glenna DeWeese, contralto; James Hull, tenor; and James Courtney, bass.

Tickets for the concert will not be available at the Mission on performance dates. They may be purchased in advance at Carmel Music, Dolores and Sixth, Carmel; Lily Walker Records and Music, 169 Fountain Ave., Pacific Grove; and at the Symphony office, room 8, Sunset Center, San Carlos and Ninth, Carmel.

THE REV. JOHN WALSTED, a monk in the Episcopal Order of the Holy Cross, is shown here with several of his religious paintings in the style of Russian schools in the 14th-16th centuries. Several of the icons are on display at Casa Dolores Gallery in Carmel Plaza, Carmel.

Art film at Sunset

A Time-Life film entitled Man: The Measure of All Things will be shown at the monthly Brown Bag Cinema, Thursday, Dec. 15, at Sunset Center, San Carlos and Ninth, Carmel.

Everyone is invited to bring their lunch to the Sunset Center patio at 12:30 p.m. for an hour of fellowship before the free film program begins at 1:30 p.m. Sunset Center provides the coffee.

The film is about 15th-century Italy and the art of Botticelli, Bellini and Van Eyck.

Minister-painter shows religious icons in Carmel

A collection of religious icons painted by the Rev. John Walsted, a monk in the Episcopal Order of the Holy Cross, is on display at Casa Dolores Gallery in Carmel Plaza, Carmel.

Walsted paints the religious images on wooden panels with egg tempera in the style of the 14th- to 16th-century North Russian schools. He is one of only a handful of artists in the United States still practicing the ancient art.

Walsted first saw a collection of icons while he was an undergraduate at the University of Oregon. Although he has a master's degree in divinity and was an abstract painter, he did not begin to paint them himself until several years later.

"I had always wanted an icon and thought I could never afford it, so I painted one," he said. "It was partly out of curiosity to see if I could paint something from that period."

He has painted about 200 icons and now spends most of his time studying, painting and restoring them. He also teaches classes in iconography at the Mt. Calvary Retreat House near Santa Barbara and occasionally at the Los Angeles County Museum of Art.

Icons, which date from the beginnings of Christianity and were most prevalent in the Eastern Orthodox areas of Eastern Europe, are not to be compared to western sacred art, he said, because in approach, theology and style there is little resemblance.

"Icons are a kind of window through which the inhabitants of the celestial world look down into ours," he said. "To look through the window of an icon would be to look straight into the celestial world. The repetitive themes or quality of the icon are not due to a deficiency of artistic imagination, but by the very nature of the icon any intervention of human imagination is excluded."

He recently completed a month-long, one-man show of his works in Rochester, N.Y. He plans an extended trip to Russia and the Balkan countries to "familiarize myself with medieval techniques of early icon paintings."

Some of his best-known icons include St. John the Baptist, Elijah's Assumption (which he painted especially for Los Angeles Episcopal Bishop Robert C. Rusack) and St. George and the Dragon.

Gallery hours are 10:30 a.m.-5 p.m. For more information, phone 624-3438.

El Teatro Campesino stages religious play

A modern adaptation of an 18th-century miracle play, La Virgen del Tepeyac, will be performed by El Teatro Campesino in the Mission San Juan Bautista Friday-Monday, Dec. 9-12. The play describes the appearance of the Virgin Mary to a Mexican Indian on Dec. 12, 1531.

El Teatro Campesino has presented the play since 1971 as a special Christmas celebration that is an acto de fe or act of faith as well as a ritualistic dance/drama bursting with colorful costumes, dances and songs. This year, the drama troupe will be joined by the Los Lupenos dance troupe of San Jose.

In keeping with the special nature of the event, the productions have been limited each year to the few days that precede the historical date of the miracle on Dec. 12.

The heart of the play is the story of the appearance of La Virgen de Guadalupe to a humble indio. Originally named Cuauhtlatoctzin, the indio had only recently been converted to Catholicism and renamed Juan Diego. He encountered and spoke with the mysterious lady at dawn on the ancient hill of Tepeyac, "the blinding light of the sun behind her and the moon at her feet." She was dark and beautiful and spoke to Juan Diego in his native tongue. She was, she said, ininonantzin ipalnemohuani, the mother of the Giver of Life, and she had come to save him from total destruction.

Part of the significance of the presentation is that it has always been staged in the old mission, known as the "cathedral of California missions." La Virgen del Tepeyac has evolved into a trilingual production in Spanish, English and Nahuatl, or Aztec.

Performances are scheduled at 8 p.m. Friday, 7 and 9 p.m. Saturday, 2:30 and 8 p.m. Sunday and at daybreak, 6 a.m., Monday. There is no charge for admission.

El Teatro Campesino will also present Posadas and La Pastorela Dec. 22-24 at the mission. The Posada is the re-creation of a journey with Mary and Joseph from the mission to a selected place. Pastorelas are shepherd's plays that depict the long trek of the first shepherds to the holy site of the Nativity. Franciscan missionaries brought the pastorela to Mexico in the 16th century, where it has flourished ever since.

The pastorela will be performed outdoors in front of the mission. There is no charge to attend.

For additional information, phone El Centro Campesino Cultural, San Juan Bautista, 1-623-4505.

Padre cagers, 1-1, face first foe in PG tourney

By JAY POSNER

AFTER SPLITTING their first two games, the Carmel Padre varsity basketball team will travel to Pacific Grove tonight to play Marina High School of San Leandro in the first round of the Pacific Grove High School Invitational Tournament.

The defending Central Coast Section Region IV champion Padres opened their season Thursday, Dec. 1, in Monterey, losing to the Toreadores 53-47. On Saturday on the home court, the Padres defeated the defending Monterey Bay League champion Seaside Spartans 45-37.

Against Seaside, the Padres jumped out to a 9-0 lead in the first six minutes, but Seaside fought back and led by Cliff Jackson's eight points, the Spartans scored 19 points in the second quarter and led 25-23 at halftime.

The Padres fought back in the third quarter to take a five-point lead with 1:30 left, but Seaside pulled to within a point as the third quarter ended.

In the fourth quarter, it was Carmel's free throw shooting and tough defense that was the difference. The Padres didn't make a field goal in the final quarter, but they did sink seven free throws and their defense held Seaside scoreless in the last seven minutes of the game.

JOHN LUCIDO, the only junior on the Padre varsity, led Carmel with 11 points and Tom and John Frincke added eight points each. The Frinckes also led the Padres in rebounding, with Tom grabbing nine and John pulling in seven. Tom also dished out six assists. Randy Brown scored 14 points to pace the Spartans.

AGAINST Monterey last week, the Padres were held scoreless in the last four minutes of the game and the Toreadores scored the last eight points to win a 53-47 squeaker in the Monterey gym.

Keith Walker led Monterey with 24 points, 18 before halftime, when Monterey led 27-25. After Dave Stevenson gave Carmel a 31-29 lead with 6:10 left in the third quarter, Monterey scored 12 of the next 14 points to take a 43-35 lead at the third quarter buzzer. The Padres battled back by scoring the first eight points of the final quarter to tie the game 43-43. The teams traded baskets and a John Frincke jumpshot gave the Padres their final points and a 47-45 lead with 4:05 left in the game. Monterey scored the last eight points, however, to hand Carmel the loss.

Tom Frincke led the Padres with 16 points and his twin brother, John, added 10.

ON THE junior varsity level, the Padres split their first two games, defeating Monterey 49-40 and losing to Seaside 41-34. Against Monterey, sophomore Adam Sherburne led the Padres with 21 points and Mark Nottenkamper added seven. Against the Spartans, Art Strum had 14 points and Sherburne pitched in 10.

Youthful cast at Barnyard keeps zest in 'The Fantasticks'

By BARBARA MOUNTREY

THE CHARM of The Fantasticks has captured audiences for almost 20 years now, making it the longest-running musical in history. In the Carmel Barnyard Theatre production, that charm is still intact, maintained by the freshness of an exuberant young cast.

The dashing El Gallo, central figure of the piece, is played in swashbuckling style by the handsome Bruce Tuthill. His rich voice, familiar to theatergoers who have seen any of the Barnyard's previous productions or the cabaret after the show, is admirably suited to his part. His rendition of Try to Remember is smooth and persuasive, setting the mood for all that is to follow.

BARBARA BRUSSELL and Cliff Skoglund, as Luisa and Matt, are appropriately naive and shallow in the first act, as untouched by reality as most adolescents. Luisa sings love songs to herself, Matt to his image of her. They are sweet and lyrical to the point of being downright irritating, just as the playwright and composer intended.

The conspiratorial fathers of the young lovers are a delightful pair, played with great spirit by Thomas R. Sanchez (Bellomy) and Keith Decker (Hucklebee). Unlike the Tweedledum-Tweedledee effect of some productions, the contrast in the heights and styles of these two funny young men creates an additional element of humor. The always-clever choreography of director Fred Weiss contributes considerably to the sense of teamwork between the two of them and also involves the somewhat enigmatic character of the Mute. The latter figure, played by Dan Ursino, has a haunting quality that permeates all his actions, whether he is acting as a wall, producing magical swords, or cakewalking across the stage with the two fathers.

OTHER COMIC relief is provided by the aging actors, hauled out of a theatrical trunk like some dilapidated costume, played by Alexey Lopukhin (Henry) and Calvin Burke (Mortimer). Burke has a classic scene in which he demonstrates at considerable length his main skill: dying beautifully. In the second act, these two effectively manage the change to distinctly menacing figures, as they teach the young Matt that "beyond that road lies despair." In fact, all the characters achieve considerably greater depth in the second act, except El Gallo, who has been a fully fleshed character all along.

The Fantasticks plays Thursday through Saturday at 8:30 p.m. and Sunday at 2 p.m. There is a lunch each Sunday at noon.

'Oliver' runs at Wharf

Oliver, the great hit musical about the adventures of a young orphan in London, is staged Friday-Sunday evenings at the Wharf Theatre in Monterey. Curtain is at 8:30 p.m. each evening.

Based on Charles Dickens's novel Oliver Twist, the musical revolves around the orphaned Oliver's changes of fortune while he searches for a home and love in the lower depths of London.

The play, with book, music and lyrics by Lionel Bart, contains such memorable songs as It's a Fine Life, Who Will Buy, Consider Yourself, Oom Pah Pah, As Long as He Needs Me and Where Is Love.

The movie version of the smash hit musical won five Academy Awards in 1968.

Theatergoers may also take advantage of a special dinner-show package offered by Walter Becker's Cellar Restaurant, 150 W. Franklin, Monterey, and the Wharf Theatre. A dinner-show price includes a five-course Italian dinner with wine at the Cellar and admission to the play. Dinner is served at 6:30 p.m. on all performance evenings.

For reservations for the dinner and show or for the show only, phone the Wharf Theatre box office, 372-7367.

Dickens dinner on Sunday

"From roast beef to plum pudding," is the bill of fare for the traditional Dickens Dinner at All Saints' Episcopal Church on Sunday.

The Dickens Dinner, a traditional holiday celebration in Carmel, includes caroling by the church youth group dressed in costumes of the Charles Dickens era. Dinner is served in the parish hall. It will be prepared by the Men's Club chefs. The hall is decorated with pine, holly, a Christmas tree laden with gifts and festive tables set with pine sprigs and candles.

The annual Christmas dinner was inspired by Diane Stokoe in 1970. She started it as an addition to the yearly church bazaar, and because the year was the centennial of Dickens's death, she envisioned bringing his "Christmas Carol" to life. The first dinner was a success and each year now it sells out completely. The number of guests is limited to 350.

under 12. The church nursery will be open. Transportation is available for the 5:30 p.m. seating.

The chairwoman of the event is Mrs. William Provost. The chefs are Eldon Dedini, Pat Casey, William Provost, James Neill and other members of the parish. In the library, a variety of desserts including tipsy and persimmon puddings, sweets, cheeses and coffee will be served under the supervision of Mrs. James Arthur and Mrs. Perry Bower. Mrs. DeForest Sweeney is in charge of decorations and the Christmas tree is donated by Olga Scheffler.

Guests also may wear costumes if they wish. Seatings are at 5:30, 6:30 and 7:30 p.m. and guests are advised to make reservations now. Call Joan Irwin at 624-2140.

Tickets are $6 each for adults, $2 each for children

'Best wine year,' Mirassou says

The 1977 crush is the best on record at Mirassou Winery, according to vineyard manager Peter Mirassou.

"We were very fortunate to have had sufficient water supply in this dry year," he said. "There were no damaging rains late in the season and the sugar and acid readings are excellent with tonnage slightly above 1976."

During the last week of September, the first variety (Gewurztraminer) was picked at 24.5 degrees Brix and .77 acid. Cabernet Sauvignon measured 23.3 degrees Brix and .82 acid. Zinfandel was later harvested at 27 degrees Brix and .98 acid, an unusually high sugar and acid content which is expected to develop into an extremely unique wine.

Ideal weather conditions late in the year gave the harvest an atmosphere free from the threat of impending rain or fruit deterioration. The absence of bunch rot or mold (caused by humid conditions following rain) resulted in very clean fruit. The cleanliness of the fruit along with the ideal sugar/acid balance gives winemaker Don Alexander wide latitude on the exact style of wines to be produced.

Mirassou white wines will be released in the spring of 1978; reds are aged longer and will be available in about three years.

'Dancing Bear' poets offer reading

The Dancing Bears, a group of poets who give intensive workshops and group readings, will present selections from their works Friday, Dec. 9, at 8 p.m. at Monterey Peninsula College Humanities room 1, 980 Fremont St., Monterey. Everyone is welcome to attend the free program sponsored by the MPC English department.

The Dancing Bears take their name from a quotation by American poet Theodore Roethke.

Members of the group are Virginia De Araujo, author of five novels in English and Portuguese; Frank Cady, editor of WPA; Richard Maxwell, English and poetry teacher at Foothill College; Rob Swigart, poet, novelist, filmmaker and teacher; Gurney Norman, editor of the Last Whole Earth Catalogue; Buff Bradley, a staff writer for Sunset Magazine; and Cate Abbe, a widely published Palo Alto poet.

For more information, phone 373-5522.

Adventure film show in Monterey

Search for Ulysses and Zoo will be screened at the weekly matinee program at the Monterey Public Library, 625 Pacific St., Monterey, Thursday, Dec. 8, 2:30 p.m. Everyone is welcome to attend the free, 65-minute film program.

Search for Ulysses, a 53-minute color film, retraces the legendary journey of Ulysses, as told in Homer's Odyssey, showing places in the Mediterranean Sea that could have been the cave of Cyclops, the Sirens' rocks, the island of Circe and other legendary sites.

Zoo, a 12-minute black-and-white film, is a series of comparisons between people and animals, concentrating on shared facial expressions and physical gestures, such as eating, sleeping, yawning and walking. The humorous situations are punctuated by a well-timed jazz score.

For more information, phone 372-7391.

Toys for Tots musicale Sunday

A Toys for Tots Musical Event will be sponsored by the Monterey Bay Hot Jazz Society and the Filipino Community of the Monterey Peninsula, Sunday, Dec. 11, 2-6 p.m. at El Estero Hall, 629 Pearl St., Monterey.

Members of the Hot Jazz Society will provide live jazz for dancing and listening, and a buffet will be served.

Admission is one unwrapped toy and $1. The collected toys will be distributed to needy children in the area.

For more information, phone 624-6023.

REHEARSAL NIGHT at the high school band room draws about 25 amateur musicians who are part of the Carmel Community Concert Band. (Del Kaller photos)

Playing in the band — community style

"You can only practice alone for so long," says Henry Avila, leader of the Carmel Community Concert Band. Two years ago, the music instructor from Carmel High School started the informal band and today it boasts between 20 and 40 musicians, many of them tired of making music alone.

The band is composed of Peninsula residents who have one thing in common — musical ability.

Who plays in the band? Well, there's a retired railroad dispatcher. A 70-year-old grandmother. A 12-year-old student from Carmel Middle School. A circus band leader. A horse trainer. A former banker.

Who else? A pest control field representative. An Army wife. A medical secretary. A landscaper. A Carmel Bach Festival member. An elementary school principal. An entertainer at a local Mexican restaurant.

The band meets on Tuesdays in the high school music room from 7:30 to 9:30 p.m. If you want to join, the only requirement is that you bring your own instrument, according to Avila. That is why a few members joined, he explains. "Their instruments were sitting at home for so long, they brought them here to see if they still worked," Avila says.

CONDUCTOR by night, music teacher by day, Henry Avila formed the Carmel Community Concert Band in 1975.

"It keeps their lips in shape," says Avila, 42.

In shape for what? For one thing, a special Christmas concert at Sunset Center mext Wednesday. The concert will begin at 8 p.m. Admission to the 90-minute program is free.

The concert will include a medley of Christmas favorites: "White Christmas," "Deck the Halls," "Silent Night" and "Do You Hear What I Hear?"

The band also will play a medley of popular songs, including selections from the Broadway play "Oliver."

How does anyone conduct a band with such a diverse membership?

"Very carefully," answers Avila. The band also performs a spring concert at Carmel High School and is available for community events, he adds.

The concert band class is in cooperation with the Carmel Adult School program. "But the atmosphere is relaxed and informal," Avila says.

Musicians come out of the closet

Avila serves as music coordinator for the Carmel Unified School District. He plays clarinet and received his M.A. from the University of the Pacific in Stockton.

The band conductor lives in Carmel with his wife Mary and their two daughters.

THE PLAYERS are a diverse group. In the clarinet section, the band's oldest and youngest musicians sit side by side. They are Edna Lewis and Troy Ishikawa.

When small children first start riding lessons, they have problems bigger kids don't have. "Kick the horse!" bellows the riding instructor, growing red and frustrated. The tot's tiny foot twitches the saddle blanket.

"What was that? A fly?" muses the horse. His eyes remain closed.

But the resourceful riding instructor has a gimmick to wake up sleeping horses and get the tiny riders going too. Games. Playing games raises everyone's adrenalin level.

Caught up in the spirit of playing, the timid rider forgets to stay tight and terrorized. He begins to really ride. Galvanized by game playing, the pluggiest school horse stays on his toes. He knows if he doesn't move his buns promptly when called upon, some tiny child is going to sock it to him.

Traditional gymkhana games, barrel racing, pole bending, etc., are too advanced for little beginners. Their games must be slower and safer. And for teaching purposes they must be less competitive than gymkhana and include the entire class at once. It also helps to have a good cushion or sand on the playing area.

Here are some class games suitable for the real novices — the kids who can just about walk and trot and steer if their horse feels like cooperating.

FOLLOW THE LEADER: One child is chosen to be the leader. He performs various stunts as he leads the line of riders, i.e., feet out of stirrups, arms over his head, touch the fence, etc. Those who fail to imitate the leader will be told to go to the end of the line by the instructor. Every two minutes the leader himself goes to the end of the line allowing the next rider in line to become the new leader.

RED LIGHT-GREEN LIGHT: With all the riders lined up beside one another at one end of the ring, one child rides to the far end of the ring. While his back and his horse's tail still face the group, he calls "GREEN LIGHT!"

This is the signal for the other riders to start moving forward at any gait they can manage. The leader counts to 20 and shouts "RED LIGHT!" Then he turns his horse around.

When the leader gets turned around and stopped he should not see any of the class moving. Anybody who has not come to a full stop will be sent back to the starting line.

The leader turns his horse around and repeats the "Red light-Green light" procedure until one of the riders has reached him. This rider becomes the leader for the next game.

PAIR TAG: The children choose partners and while mounted hold each other's hands. One pair is chosen to be IT. They attempt to tag the other pairs. (Tagging one rider of a pair is sufficient.) At the discretion of the riding instructor tagged pairs may be retired until all are tagged or may continue in the game as helpers of the IT pair.

Games which require riders to get on and off horses are a lot of fun if the horses will cooperate and if they are not seven feet tall. For some children remounting can be frustrating or even dangerous. The instructor must know his class before calling for a mount/dismount game.

This game allows riders to remount as slowly as they please:

MUSICAL TIRES: The game requires one tire less than the number of riders. For absolute beginners the tires are placed next to one another in the center of the ring. Slightly more advanced children may have the tires placed around the perimeter of the ring with spaces between them. While the instructor sings, plays music or claps his hands, the children ride in a circle past the tires. When the music stops the riders dismount and throw themselves into the tire nearest in front of them. For safety's sake there is an absolute rule against going back to a tire you have already passed. Play repeats with one less tire until all the riders except one have been eliminated.

This game requires the riders to remount quickly:

RELAY RACE: The class is divided into two teams. Each team lines up at a starting line at one end of the ring. At the instructor's signal one rider at a time rides to the end of the ring, performs some required stunt, and returns to the group. The second rider starts off as the first rider returns across the starting line. First team to finish is, of course, the winner.

The required stunts can be as simple or as crazy or even as educational as the riding instructor wants. Some examples: Dismount, crawl through a tire, remount. Dismount, put on a nightgown, a dress, a pair of big pants or a costume, remount. Start out bareback, dismount, saddle the horse, remount. Start with an extra horse for each team: dismount, jump on the strange horse. For birthday parties: dismount, blow out a candle and eat a cupcake, remount.

When it is inadvisable to have students remount, this event can be done as a "lead back to the starting line" event. Some variations: lead back while hopping in a feed sack or lead back while holding an egg in a spoon.

SIMON SAYS: This is a good game with which to end a game-playing session, because the instructor can take the part of Simon to spare everyone's feelings, and because it is absolutely noncompetitive. The riders are to follow orders which are prefaced by "Simon Says." All other orders are to be ignored. For instance the instructor could say, "Simon says 'Put your hands on your head.' Simon says 'Trot your horse.' Stop!" And anyone who stopped when Simon didn't say "Stop!" would wear a foolish grin.

IT'S FUN TO PLAY WITH A HORSE.

Treks to Garnet Beach, Toro Park set for weekend

A youth group hike to Garnet Beach and a leisurely four-mile hike in Toro Park are planned by the Ventana Chapter of the Sierra Club this weekend. Members of other chapters and interested nonmembers are welcome to join the outings.

Both experienced and novice youth hikers are welcome to join the hike on Garnet Beach, Saturday, Dec. 10. Meet at Brinton's in Carmel Rancho Shopping Center, Highway 1 and Carmel Valley Rd., at 8:30 a.m. to form car pools for the drive to Molera State Park, just north of Big Sur. The hike will be six miles long with a 1,000-foot elevation gain. Hikers will have lunch on Garnet Beach, one of the few beaches in the area with beautiful garnet-red sand.

Bring lunch, water, cameras and driver reimbursement and plan on being back to Carmel by 4 p.m. For more information, phone leader Russ Schwanz, 375-9169.

Hikers will meet at 1 p.m. Sunday, Dec. 11, at Cinema 70 in Del Monte Center, Monterey, to form car pools for the trip to Toro Park. A leisurely stroll through and over some of the lower-elevation canyons and ridges is planned. Bring water. For more information, phone leader Roy Anderson, Salinas, 1-449-0162.

Puppy show Sunday at fairgrounds

Puppies of all sizes, shapes and colors will take to the show ring Sunday, Dec. 11, in the Del Monte Kennel Club Annual All-Breed Puppy Match at the Monterey County Fairgrounds, Fairgrounds and Garden Rds., Monterey. Judging begins at 10 a.m.

Spectators are welcome to attend; there is no charge for admission.

Conformation classes for purebred puppies 3-12 months old and obedience classes for puppies at least six months old are scheduled. A panel of judges from all over the state has been assembled.

Breeds will be judged in alphabetical order in each ring. Indoor facilities are available if it should rain.

For more information, phone show secretary Susan Green, Salinas, 1-484-9755.

SOME LOCALS remember Teater for his role in selling war bonds during World War II. He donated a painting to a war-benefit showing at the Pine Inn. It was sold to the highest bidder, who put the proceeds into U.S. bonds. (George T. C. Smith photo)

He says goodbye to the Grand Tetons

Archie Teater moves his easel to Carmel

By JIM BARRETT

TRANSPLANTING Archie "Teton" Teater from Jackson Hole, Wyo., the rugged high country he made famous with his oil paintings, is about as easy as removing Teddy Roosevelt's portrait from the rock atop Mount Rushmore.

Raised in a covered wagon until he was 15, Archie is one of the last living men of the Old West. At 76, however, he and his wife, Patricia, have decided if they have to move, they will settle in Carmel. The nearest heart specialist in the Tetons is more than 100 miles away, so the couple decided in October to buy a house in Carmel. Archie has a heart condition.

For him, the move does not mean retirement. To the contrary, he has spent six weeks painting the street scenes of Carmel. They will be added to some 550 other paintings he completed during a 115-nation globe-hopping tour that started in 1959. Archie has painted scenes from Moscow to Marrakesh.

"We have lived a wonderful life," said Archie, nodding at his wife. "I think we will have a good life here in Carmel, too."

So far, he has completed 12 local street scenes. His earlier works today hang among some of the most prestigious collections in the world — the collections of Rothschild, Kissinger and Rockefeller, to name a few.

THE SON OF an Idaho miner, Archie has opinions that cut like a diamond-core drill. For instance, he has no truck with the belief a college education makes a person smarter. He never finished the seventh grade himself. He was expelled one day when the teacher caught him sketching in class.

"I don't think somebody should be shot for not finishing school. I'm just hoping by saying this that I'm of some value to these younger fellows," he said.

Archie started painting at 12. He eventually studied at the Julienne Academy in Paris and with the Art Students' League in New York. But it was his drive to paint and the patronage of wealthy vacationers he met in Jackson Hole that brought him success, he indicated in a chat last week.

As a young man, Archie spent five years as a lumberjack in Idaho and Oregon. Working in the timbered wilds of the Sawtooth Mountains without a painting canvas, Archie said he once got so desperate he cut canvas from the sleeping tarp another lumberjack owned. The canvas tarps were used like tents. At night, the lumberjacks would bed down outdoors and cover themselves with the heavy canvas.

"Well," Archie said with a devilish grin, "this fellow got on his cot and threw the canvas over himself. There was a big square cut out from where his chest was. Yeah, he got mad, but there wasn't anything he could do."

ARCHIE AND PATRICIA got married in 1941, about three months after they first met. Patricia, fresh from her studies in Europe, was a guest at the ranch of Eugene Meyer, then chairman of the Federal Reserve Bank. Once a journalism student, Patricia became friends with a woman who was the publisher of the Jackson Hole newspaper.

Her friend played matchmaker one night, inviting Archie to dinner. Archie wasn't what you could call a "starving artist," but he had a healthy Teton appetite, as it is told. Patricia said she was told Archie had been painting in the Tetons since 1928 and she had heard his praise while on her holiday there.

"He ate pretty good and we had a good dinner. The two of us ladies had prepared it. He was kind of quiet until I brought out the strawberry shortcake. Then he leaned over and kissed me. That was it. We got married three months later," she said.

Together, the couple took to traveling the United States pulling a house trailer. Archie painted several outdoor scenes. Then in 1952, they asked architect Frank Lloyd Wright to design a house for them in Jackson Hole.

Together, the Teaters have visited some 115 nations since 1959

"He asked us how much we wanted to spend. I told him $10,000 — I might go to $15,000," explained Archie. "Well, he built a beautiful house. It has telescoping walls. It has about 1,500 square feet and the Snake River is down below. Building it, the challenge was just tremendous."

PATRICIA IS Archie's worst critic. She studied art criticism for a while in college and her barbs once got Archie so riled he challenged her to do something better. She claims she did. She made clay figurines of cowboys and the 12 she made all sold.

"Archie is a snob in reverse," she said. Talking about her life with him, she confessed she still refuses to forgive him for passing up a chance to dine with actor Edward G. Robinson.

As Archie told it, "I was painting from the Top of the Mark (Mark Hopkins Hotel, San Francisco) when one day Edward G. Robinson came by. He watched me work and came back quite a few times. One day he invited us to his place for dinner. I turned him down. I was afraid of rich people."

Archie had two other things to say in the mid-morning chat. One was praise for the Concorde, the supersonic passenger jet. He and Patricia rode it from Europe and, despite the anti-SST clamor in the U.S., Archie said he is convinced it is a breakthrough in travel. "It makes the others seem like riding in a wheelbarrow," he said.

Another thing. "The thing that bothers me out here is these highways. They're badly marked. These big trucks get in front of you and you can't see a thing. They need better signs, that's for sure."

Blunt-spoken Archie remains unchanged. As Fleur Cowles once described him in Architectural Digest: "Archie Teater, now called the Burl Ives of canvas, (is a man) who paints in Wyoming with a frontiersman's eye — with the deadshot realism of the Remingtons — a man who knows his West."

Eckankar seminar opens on Saturday

Eck, the Force in This Universe and Beyond is the title of a two-day seminar on Eckankar scheduled Saturday and Sunday, Dec. 10-11, at the Monterey Conference Center, 1 Portola Plaza, Monterey.

The seminar begins at 11 a.m. Saturday with a speech by Carl Stromquist entitled Power and Freedom. Other sessions are scheduled at 1 and 7 p.m. Saturday and 11 a.m. Sunday.

Eckankar is the study of consciousness and "soul travel" based on the writings of Paul Twitchel.

Admission to the first session is free. Others are $6 each or $16 for the entire seminar.

For more information, phone 372-8900.

'Olio Revue' on stage at California's First Theatre

The Fifth Annual Olio Revue is on stage at California's First Theatre, Scott and Pacific Sts., Monterey, Friday and Saturday evenings. Curtain is at 8:30 p.m.

An olio is an old-time "aftershow" that literally followed a full-length melodrama or drama. Olios are something like vaudeville or music hall entertainment, consisting of songs and lots of comedy as well as a variety of short skits.

For 10 months a year, members of the Troupers of the Gold Coast, the resident repertory company at the theater, stage an olio after each performance of a 19th-century melodrama. Then in December and January, they combine the "best of the olios" into the full-length Olio Revue.

The First Theatre is a registered State Historical Monument as well as an active playhouse. It was built in 1844 as a boarding house and saloon for sailors. Plays have been performed continuously in the theater since 1937.

For reservations or more information, phone 375-4916 Wednesday-Saturday after 1 p.m.

Yule fair in Santa Cruz

A fantasy festival of arts and crafts, food, music, entertainment and good old-fashioned Christmas cheer is planned at the annual Santa Cruz Christmas Faire Friday-Sunday, Dec. 9-11, and Dec. 16-18, at the Cocoanut Grove on the Boardwalk, Santa Cruz. Faire hours are 10 a.m.-10 p.m. each day.

On display in the grand old ballroom will be a highly selective juried show of California's finest artists and craftspeople. All booth displays and costumes are designed by the artists themselves to portray their own favorite Christmas fantasies.

Entertainment on stage and throughout the fair will include musicians, puppeteers, wandering mimes and jugglers, clowns, magicians and dancers. Country western star Larry Hosford will play from 8 p.m. on the opening night of the faire, Friday, Dec. 9.

A native of Salinas, Hosford recently released an album entitled Cross Words, on which he is joined by Leon Russell, Tom Scott and George Harrison.

Other guest stars who will make evening appearances are Fly by Night, the Artichoke Brothers, Jill Croston, the Sirocco Belly Dancers and Santa Cruz's own Tapu performing his death-defying fire-eating act.

A wide variety of foods will be sold, including cheese cake, carrot cake and chocolate cake, baklava, eggnog, ice cream, falafels and full meals of turkey, Swedish meatballs, stuffed zucchini or beef teriyaki in the restaurant upstairs.

Admission is $2 for adults, $1.50 for senior citizens and $1 for children.

For more information, phone Santa Cruz, 1-426-4188.

Puppet show Saturday in Monterey

A puppet show entitled A Giant Christmas Wish will be presented at the Monterey Public Library, 625 Pacific St., Monterey, at the young people's department Christmas party, Saturday, Dec. 17, at 2 p.m.

Two short films, The Twelve Days of Christmas and Christmas Fantasy, will be shown and refreshments will be served.

All children are welcome to attend the free program. For more information, phone Sally Copeland, 372-7391.

'Nutcracker' film at Sunset Center

A film of Tchaikovsky's great Christmas ballet, The Nutcracker, will be screened at Sunset Center, San Carlos and Ninth, Carmel, Thursday-Sunday, Dec. 8-11. Evening screenings are at 7 p.m. and a matinee Saturday begins at 2 p.m.

The film is of a performance by the Philharmonic Orchestra of Budapest and the New York City Ballet with Edward Villella, Patricia McBride and Melissa Hayden.

The Nutcracker is the enchanting tale of a little girl named Clara whose nutcracker turns into a prince and takes her to the Candy Kingdom, where she meets the Sugar Plum Fairy and attends a festival of ribbon candy dancers, wood nymphs, Spanish dancers, a Turkish magician, Mother Goose and Morning Rose and the sugar flowers.

Tickets are $3. Groups of 10 or more may purchase tickets for $2.50 and groups of 15 or more may purchase tickets for $2 each. Tickets are good for any performance and various members of groups need not attend the same performance. For additional information, phone 624-3996.

Monroe film on tap

Bus Stop, a 1956 film starring Marilyn Monroe, will be screened Tuesday, Dec. 13, 7:30 p.m. at Sunset Center, San Carlos and Ninth, Carmel. The film is part of the American Theatre Film Festival series sponsored by Sunset Center.

The film, based on a Broadway stage success by William Inge, is the story of a naive cowhand, played by Don Murray, who meets a sexy entertainer (Monroe in one of her best roles) at a bus stop and falls in love with her despite warnings from his pal, played by Arthur O'Connell.

'Harvey' at Studio

Harvey, the delightful fable of a gentle tippler and the six-foot invisible rabbit he has adopted for a friend, is staged Friday-Sunday evenings at the Studio Theatre/Restaurant, in Carmel. Dinner is at 7 and curtain at 8:30 p.m. Friday and Saturday evenings; both are one hour earlier Sunday.

Jim Jensen plays the whimsical Elwood P. Dowd, the role made famous first on screen and then on stage by Jimmy Stewart. Florence Larsen plays his straight-laced sister, who is continually embarrassed by his actions. Other cast members include Jeff Hudelson, Barbara Conklin and Skip Frates. Bill Asp is the director.

The comedy of eccentricity by Mary Chase starred Frank Fay and Josephine Hull in the original version, which opened in New York City on Nov. 1, 1944.
